

Kevin Rogans a young lawyer in a big New York firm. The last thing he needs is a pro bono case on top of his work load. His clients in the mid-West: a smart and beautiful girl who has fallen into deep schizophrenia overnight. Her friends start falling as well. Schizophrenia isn't contagious-or is it? The girls all live surrounded by fields of genetically modified corn. Could an infectious agent jump from corn to attack the human brain? The clock is ticking. Its growing season. Can Kevin prove that allowing the corn to bloom will cause great, irreparable and immediate harm? Arrayed against him, one of the worlds most powerful corporations will stop at nothing to suppress the evidence. James Thornton, one of the ten people who could change the world (New Statesman) is one of the worlds top environmental lawyers. Founding CEO of ClientEarth, former head of an international neuroscience institute, and a member of the bars of California, New York, and the United States Supreme Court, he is also a member of the Law Society of England and Wales.
